

Travel Risk Management

Every company needs a plan.

Risk is a commonly used term but one that is gaining increasing visibility due to the constantly changing travel climate. Global organizations now have to deal with both the perception and reality that there are increased risks to employees and business operations around the world. There is a need to provide a systemic approach to understand risk, who may be impacted and what the organization should do to protect its travelers.

Businesses must have a defined plan in place for locating travelers on the road, in the air and in hotels. Key members of the executive team, security department, human resources, and the travel or procurement departments must be involved in creating this plan. Having the plan in place and making all employees aware of it is a key part of the process; however, the plan cannot be efficiently implemented without travel data. Booking all travel via a central source enables corporations to have access to consolidated travel data, including detailed current and future travel reports.

Covington Travel has solutions in place that allow companies to support risk policy initiatives and keep travelers happy. We welcome the opportunity to discuss self-booking, full service or a combination thereof with interested parties. Our sophisticated reporting systems, mobile apps and 24/7 service will provide peace of mind that your travel risk policy is managed efficiently.
